Wait for Pakistani Planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials have told a Pakistani military delegation that their country will have to wait for a number of years before receiving new F-16 fighter-bombers, sources said Friday.

The proposed sale of F-16s reported was the center of three days of discussions between senior defense and State Department officials and a military delegation from Pakistan that came here following an announced U.S. agreement to provide $3 billion in military and economic aid.

Defense officials, who asked to remain anonymous, said the United States offered no specific number of F-16s and it was made clear that the Pakistanis would not receive the first such planes for some years because of previous commitments to other countries and the need to fill up U.S. Air Force orders.

The only reason for Friday's delay, he said, was that it would have been embarrassing to ship the planes almost simultaneously with the new Israeli attacks. The suspension June 10 came three days after Israel bombed and destroyed Iraq's nuclear reactor.

Mr. Fischer said he learned Thursday night that the planes had already been flown from Fort Worth, Texas, to Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire for final outfitting. He said that the United States could still halt delivery of the jets, but the authoritative State Department source said that the decision still would be to resume deliveries.

An Alliance at Risk

The seven-nation summit opening in Ottawa on Monday is being billed as something of a command performance in the international center ring for Mr. Reagan.

Ice Cream Capitalism

by Charles T. Powers

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Upon a time, his countrymen in Africa might have helped to build railroads, to explore uncharted rivers, to track big game. But Paul L. Mullen, 43, runs an ice cream parlor. In some ways, it is hard to think of a braver enterprise.

'Sno-Cream' — a pocket of capitalism in socialist Tanzania.

Although Mullen is an Englishman, his shop has a strongly American flavor. Indeed, it is a small shrine to consumer pleasure, festooned from floor to ceiling with the cartoon art works of Walt Disney.

in the shop frequently. There was the Western promotion, with everything in cowboy motif, and the Hawaiian promotion and various ice cream festivals.

Since 1961, the government has been Tanzania's largest industry and employer but is regarded as being under-equipped to install a workable brand of socialism in the country.

Dar es Salaam vendors could learn something at Mullen's ice cream parlor.

He was dressed, at 7:30 in the morning, in creased white jeans, white shoes, white shirt. He had a light-blue scarf around his neck, held at the throat with a tiny pin, Mickey Mouse rampant, which must be a collector's item.

Pontus Hulten Leaving Paris' Pompidou Center for L.A. Museum

by Mary Blume

PARIS — On Sept. 1, Pontus Hulten will leave the Pompidou Center, whose museum he created and heads. He starts work at the Museum of Contemporary Art in downtown Los Angeles the same day.

"Given the time difference, it's possible," Hulten says. He is a big man fond of jokes and sailing, a playful porpoise among the stuffed whales of the French cultural establishment.

Pompidou director Hulten: "A playful porpoise among the stuffed whales of the French cultural establishment."

Houston, Dr. Peter Ludwig of West Germany, Count Giuseppe Panza di Biumo from Italy and Japan's Seiji Tsutsumi. All except Tsutsumi are friends of Hulten: Their presence will presumably give the museum immediate international clout and will help keep the locals in line.

Hulten will start off in Los Angeles with an acquisition budget of $10 million. His initial Beaubourg budget was bigger, but the collection he inherited from Paris' old Museum of Modern Art on the avenue President Wilson turned out to be full of dismaying and costly holes.

tion and the opening and the big article afterwards that takes the trouble to understand. There is no such thing here. Even if there's an article on the front page of Le Monde nobody will talk about it, while articles by Hilton Kramer or John Russell in The New York Times are structural elements in the construction of the show.

Brooke Shields: Sweet 16 and No Place To Go but Up

by Roderick Mann

LOS ANGELES — A rendezvous with Brooke Shields. One approaches the encounter cautiously. Have not whole forests been felled to chronicle the activities of this teen-ager?

The appointment is for coffee at the Bel-Air Hotel, where she is staying with her mother. You meet Morn first. She turns out to be a jolly, friendly, outspoken woman, not at all like the traditional stage mother, though she is clearly very astute.

High Estimates Fall Flat

LONDON — The market for objects of art from the ancient world is sound but any attempt at forcing through speculative prices leads to failure. This was spectacularly demonstrated on July 13 at Sotheby's summer sale of "Antiquities."

Galleries in London

by Max Wykes-Joyce
LONDON — As a 22-year-old emerging from art school in Vienna, Oskar Kokoschka achieved notoriety in the conservative art journals of the imperial capital with a series of "psychological" portraits. These were painted in acid colors with fierce brushstrokes, control over which the artist seemed perilously close to losing.

COVERING ISLAM

How the Media and the Experts Determine

How We See the Rest of the World

ISLAM gets a raw deal from the U.S. media, argues Edward W. Said in "Covering Islam." Prof. Said ought to know, for he straddles the two cultures by being on the one hand, a Palestinian by birth and secondary education and a member of the Palestine National Council, the parliamentary body that oversees such agencies as the Palestine Liberation Organization, and on the other hand, Parr professor of English and comparative literature at Columbia University and the author of such distinguished critical works as "Joseph Conrad and the Fiction of Autobiography" and "Beginnings: Intention and Method," which won the first annual Lionel Trilling Award, given by Columbia University.

Indeed, it is a raw deal even to refer by the name "Islam" to the complex and varied religious, cultural and political entities that the word is meant to designate, argues Prof. Said in the last of three books he has written on the way the West perceives the Middle East. ("Orientalism" and "The Question of Palestine" were the first two.)

Intentional Double Entendre

Nevertheless, says Prof. Said, the U.S. media have persisted in "covering Islam" — the double entendre implying both reportage and suppression — as if it represented a monolithic world that existed for no other purpose than to raise the cost of oil to overthrow the leaders the United States supports, to terrorize U.S. allies, to seize diplomats and hold them hostage, to protest television fare and all too occasionally to service the United States by, say, deploying guerrillas to keep the Russians at bay in Afghanistan.

And so the United States insists on reducing "all aspects of the diverse Moslem world" to a single portmanteau cliché, and associating "Islam" with "punishment, autocracy, medieval modes of logic, theology."

To all of which indictment, one's first reaction is, so what else is new? When in the history of the world has an alien culture been characterized objectively, especially by a people that has been given an excuse to feel threatened by that alien culture? Besides, a regime such as the current one in Iran doesn't need the United States to reduce it to a caricature. Its leaders take care of that business themselves when they issue such pronouncements as the one uttered, according to a Reuter report, by Hojatoleslam Mohammed Moutazeri, shortly before he died in the blast at Islamic Republican Party headquarters on June 28, in praise of the hundreds of executions that have occurred since the shah's rule was ended in 1979: "It is better to desroy thouz sands of counterrevolutiononaries and agents motivated by the United States through our Islamic decisiveness than give them a chance to kill the children of this nation in Tehran, Kurdistan

Springboks' New Zealand Tour Opens a Winter of Discontent

By Keyes Beech
Los Angeles Times Service

INGTON, New Zealand — Rugby, which is New Zealand's national sport but comes with its national religion, has split this small country of 3 million people right down the middle — at the moment it transcends racial and class divisions and unemployment — as the South African Springboks rugby team is allowed to come here to play an all-star team.

to New Zealand in its winter of discontent — the coldest month of the year here — is not by the ferocity of the dispute.

World Series Excitement
New Zealand and South Africa are two of the leading rugby powers; a match between them is the excitement of the World Series in the area. With both sides here holding fast to the position that the tour is a political statement to a point far beyond what New Zealand would like.

ing the South African visit now are church leaders, the opposition Labor Party and a militia organization called Halt All Racist Tours. One in favor of the tour are the conservative and farmers.

all issues," said one of his critics, "and all the people he hates are on the other side. That's reason enough for him to go through with the tour."

Muldoon concedes that politically he is in a no-win situation. His party was elected with the promise not to deny visas to South African rugby players if they were invited here. For him to reverse himself would be to risk losing the election, although he concedes that opponents of the tour currently have a majority.

There is political precedent for his concern. In the early 1970s the Labor Party won by a landslide by promising, among other things, not to interfere with the South Africans' coming here to play rugby. A few months later, confronted with the threat of a vote if the South Africans came, the Labor government reversed itself. It lost the next election by a landslide.

People Forget...
"Here we have one of the most progressive governments in the world," said a middle-aged businessman. "People forget that we were the first country in the world to give women the vote. That was in 1871."

Zimbabwe Urges Boycott
SALISBURY (AP) — Zimbabwe's leading daily paper, The Herald, urged African countries Friday to decide now to boycott the 1984 Olympics Games in Los Angeles if New Zealand is allowed to participate.

Nicklaus: Pressured Grace

By Thomas Boswell
Washington Post Service
SANDWICH, England — May be nobody in sport handles the bad times like Jack Nicklaus. That's probably why he has so many good times, but Thursday was one of the worst.

Nicklaus teed off in the British Open knowing that, the day before, his 18-year-old son Steve had been charged with drunk driving after flipping and totally wrecking the family station wagon while driving on Jack Nicklaus Freeway in Columbus, Ohio.

Rogers Leads Open by 1 Over Crenshaw and Job

From Agency Dispatches

SANDWICH, England — Bill Rogers of the United States tied the Royal St. George's course record with second-round 4-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over fellow-Texan Ben Crenshaw and Briton Mick Job at the halfway point of the British Open golf championship.

Another man carding a 66 Friday was Jack Nicklaus — who pulled off a remarkable recovery from Friday's disastrous first round. "I figured after what I'd done yesterday, I'd better go out and play a good round of golf if I wanted to play again [Saturday]," Nicklaus said. His round was a single shot away from being a stroke-a-hole improvement over his first-day '83, the worst round of his career.

thinking. He walked slower and slower. He signed everything. Nicklaus' German jaw was still clenched, but he started talking, a phrase at a time. "Need another pen, don'tcha?" he asked a kid with a dead pan. He made that child's day.

fortunate that his starting times brought him the best weather conditions on both days. "Some of the other players got big scores because they teed off late. But that's the luck of the draw."

Contemplating his status as halfway leader, Rogers said, "It's a nice position to be in. I'm not one who likes to be one or two shots behind or way back — leading suits me fine."

Tom Watson, the defending champion who is aiming to equal Walter Hagen's record of four British Open victories by an American, had a 69 and a two-day 142. He suffered early setbacks, dropping shots at the 1st, 3d and 6th holes, but an eagle three at the 7th and two birdies brought him back under par for the front nine.

Watson said he was feeling in good form. "It is a much easier day to play golf," he said. "I felt the scores would be much lower. The wind is not as strong as Thursday. The course was soft and I was able to play American-style golf."

Donovan Calls Strike Spokesmen to Capital

The Associated Press
INGTON — Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, asserting that he will not deny visas to the South African rugby team, said he will not deny visas to the South African rugby team, said he will not deny visas to the South African rugby team.

unfettered by government involvement, said Earl Cox, a top aide. But Donovan also planned to tell Miller and Grebey: "If this strike is to be settled, it will have to be settled by the parties involved, and unless there is a change in attitude on both the players and owners' part, then I don't think we'll see any more baseball this year."

The players objected, saying that system would discourage teams from hiring players as free agents. A free agent is a player whose contractual obligation to his team has expired.

Jury in Arizona Clears Ex-Coach

TUCSON, Ariz. — A jury of five men and seven women has found former University of Arizona football coach Tony Mason not guilty of charges that he intended to cheat, defraud and deceive the school. The jury reached its verdict Thursday after a five-week trial.

Time Trial in Tour Is Won by Hinault

The Associated Press
SAINT-PRIEST, France — Bernard Hinault of France won the 22d leg of the 69th Tour de France bicycle race Friday, turning in a time of 1 hour, 1 minute and 16 seconds over a 46.5-kilometer (29.8-mile) individual time-trial course here and widening his lead over Lucien van Impe of Belgium to 14 minutes and 34 seconds.
